Bad Eyesight Affects

Child's Development Major handicap among American children is poor vision. It is estimated that close to 10 per cent of youngsters entering kindergarten have visual shortcomings, says the Better Vision institute. From grade to grade such shortcomings increase until about 20 out of every 100 children have visual errors when the time for graduation from grammar school rolls around. Children unable to see properly are handicapped. They may be backward in school, problem children at home, or social wallflowers in play. If a child's vision becomes worse because of neglect his whole development may be impeded, says the institute. Frequently when the cause of the handicap is discovered and
